Roger Newman, MD is a Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology and Maternal-Fetal Medicine specialist. Dr. Newman has practiced his entire career at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, and he is the Maas Endowed Chair for Reproductive Sciences. Dr. Newman has had significant academic success including 200 scientific publications and service as the national president of the Society for Maternal-Fetal Medicine. Since 2014, he has published a series of medical suspense novels with Moonshine Cove Publishing entitled Occam's Razor, Two Drifters and What Becomes which was long listed for the 2018 Chanticleer Mystery and Mayhem Award. His next novel was historical fiction and is titled Will O' the Wisp: Madness, War, and Recompense. It is about a Charleston based blockade runner named Captain Jack Holmes and the lost Confederate gold. Dr. Newman is also an award winning and highly successful author of When You're Expecting Twins, Triplets or Quads, 4th Ed. published by HarperCollins. His most recent novel is entitled Boys and is a family saga of two brothers growing up in the Great Depression and who go off to fight in World War II. Their life experiences are dramatically affected by the fact that one brother is White and the other is Black. Dr. Newman is married with 3 grown children, and lives with my wife, Diane, along the Ashley River.
