

ALLISAN BECK - BIO

I have always found enjoyment in immersing myself in the stories and characters of books. As a scientist by training, writing offers a creative release and opportunity to relay thoughts and events without the constraints imposed by technical or academic work. For many years, I have aspired to share my experiences living through Hurricane Katrina. This book represents the fulfillment of that goal. I aimed to bring the reader along in the story to relive the sounds, emotions, and sights as I did. I have thoroughly enjoyed the process of writing in my own voice, developing original ideas, and giving a voice to female characters that are often overlooked. It has been a deeply rewarding creative journey.